Early in 2016 work began renovating and fitting out a number of spaces in the YMCA HQ facility in Leederville as part of the YCollaborate Co-Working Space project. The project provides a business incubator and cooperative work spaces with a focus on the creative industries. Young people utilising the spaces are provided with the opportunity to access the supports and resources required to launch and operate their small business initiatives and connect them to industry specific mentoring and professional development opportunities.

The YCollaborate space includes provision of workspaces, access to centralised business resources (such as internet, computers, meeting and conference facilities etc.), matching with suitable, experienced mentors and the development of a collaborative work environment, designed to facilitate cooperative approaches to business and increase participants awareness of the broader community and their capacity to contribute to it and make a difference along the way.

The development and on-going delivery of the project includes input from the young people using the spaces and industry professionals. Members of the business and creative community also act as mentors to program participants. The young people participating in YCollaborate are also encouraged to take on broader roles as mentors and co-facilitators along the way; contributing and assisting in the delivery of the project and participating in the broader activities of HQ.
